The program was first released as Adobe PhotoShop 1.0 in 1987, and it debuted with features similar to those used in other popular image editing programs such as CorelDRAW, as well as existing tools such as Microsoft Paint. One of the most important versions of Photoshop was introduced in 1994, with the release of version 2.0. The software was initially sold for $1,495, an amount that kept it out of the reach of hobbyists but was affordable to professionals, many of whom used the program for its relatively inexpensive price tag. Photoshop Basic introduced a new interface for image editing and also ushered in the "layers" system, which is considered a key concept for the success of Photoshop. In 1993, the first version of Photoshop Elements was released, offering an easier way for nonprofessionals to edit their images using Photoshop as a starting point. The program was seen as a tool to increase the professional image-editing market. The first version of Photoshop Extended (now called Photoshop CS3) debuted in 1998, introducing some significant features. Photoshop became quite the program. Its features grew, and it became the standard for so-called "professional" photographers (mostly amateurs) who produced their own images, as well as for designers who created images as a part of their work. Since its introduction, Photoshop has made significant leaps forward, adding features and increasing the overall power of the program. It has grown and matured through these years as a tool that's used for a wide variety of purposes, from portrait and food photography to movie editing and graphic design. Update: In the summer of 2012, Adobe announced that it will no longer support the Windows XP operating system, at least until the end of December 2013. If you use Photoshop and the XP operating system, you will need to get a newer OS to continue using Photoshop. Photoshop is a full-featured image editing and manipulation program. Here are some of the more useful features. There will be a lot of people who want to talk with you and wish to find solutions to their problems. There will also be many others who will try to lead you down a path. You must be very sure of what you will do for them. That's why you should also be very careful about the path you choose. You must study various possibilities and make sure you are not being led to some wrong place. You must also decide which route will benefit you the most and concentrate on that, even if other people will not approve of it. It doesn't matter if they do not support you in your decisions; you need to take what is right for you. Most people do not understand that we are all responsible for our own future. Although everyone wants to change their life for the better, you must first decide what will work and which will not. If you let others do that for you, they will be able to manipulate you. You need to first develop your inner strength and learn how to evaluate situations and make decisions on your own. Don't get involved in someone else's business. You will then be open to manipulation and may find yourself losing a lot. You are also not able to take responsibility for your actions. You will always blame others when things do not work out as planned. As a part of your inner growth, you must learn how to control your mind and emotions. This is not easy, and it will require a lot of work to develop. You need to concentrate on your goals and your plan of life. You must also have the courage to do what is right for you. Do not allow anyone to interfere with your goals. Sometimes, what you are doing is considered to be a wrong thing. How can you be sure what is right for you and what is not? Only you can find the answers to these questions. It is also true that your situation may change in the future. You might fail at some moment and find yourself in a different position, but you still need to continue to work towards your goals. Always keep your plans and goals in mind. Achieving them is what will make you happy. Achieving them is what will set you free from all your problems. Focus on what you want in life
